

ABSTRACT

The present invention provides a non-T cell binding peptide and its analogs used for the treatment of rheumatoid arthritis. The polypeptide therapeutic agent can specifically inhibit abnormal immune responses of the rheumatoid arthritis, and fundamentally control the progression of this disease with effect on the initiating factor of the disease development.